

Background Information

Radville Health Facility Replacement Project

This health facility redevelopment project was announced in February 2009, as part of the renewal of 13 outdated long-term care homes in Saskatchewan. Provincial funding is provided under the government's Ready for Growth initiative.

When construction is complete, all services from the Radville Marian Health Centre will move to the new building. Residents from the long-term care area will live in two home-like units.

Construction of the new Radville integrated health facility will be finished in 2013.
